Conclusion

When I started Up The Middle, and Yergz Tonight, I vowed to not be the guy that tells you, my dedicated audience, how to live your lives. That's not freedom.

This series of interviews and episodes begins with one interview and the problems existing in my hometown that were presented to me at that time.

Though many have asked me to be persuasive in each direction, I have made a life of remaining impartial, yet here, remaining active and engaged.

I did not get to interview all candidates. I clearly regret not becoming active enough in my hometown 's political campaigns earlier than what I did. I feel that I would have been able to help my community much more than what I've done in the past two or three weeks. This, and every episode, provide some method of contact information to me, here at Studio Yergz. Please continue to use it!

Our latest interview received more attention than the previous ones for what I hope you will see are obvious, necessary reasons. Those reasons are not because of my bias in one direction or another. I'm certain that the previous four candidates, if given another opportunity, would likely answer some of their questions differently.

But as a 21 year veteran Secret Service Agent, with additional research skills previously acquired during my history and political science degrees, and having been around top notch journalism during all those years; it is my professional opinion that Jessica Skelton was at a minimum incredibly disorganized with her lack of facts. That being said, given that she too is a self-proclaimed research junkie (my words), I feel that her bare Facebook page should have much better information; none of which would have been obtained by any political action committee without her knowledge and assistance, like she said.

She mentions that she's independent and not affiliated with any political action committee nor that she is funded by any political action committee. Yet her own Facebook page shows recent photos of this year's Boyertown Halloween parade. Who provided that truck? That's funding. And if that was her truck then she provided funding to other Republicans. That's association that she claimed to not have. And why not all Republicans? Brad updegrave also made it very clear that he, too, is a republican. Yet he was not on Jessica's float.

One may answer that she was only caucusing with Republicans, to which I say again she was clearly not caucusing with all Republicans. And I found it funny that those Republicans with whom she did not caucus were Republicans openly associated with Boyertown Forward. While those Republicans she did caucus with seemed to be doing less to hide their associations with Moms For Liberty, 1776 Project, and a relatively small group called the Boyertown Patriots.

So whether through direct association, or that of friends who do less to hide support to various hate groups, the end result is still the same.

And then there's the issues.

Just saying “parental rights” is pretty much an admission that you're with Moms For Liberty. Furthermore, her liking for the quote “patriotic” teachings of the 1776 Project also indicate a lack of actual patriotism. What do I mean by that? The word “patriot” is a title that should be given to the user by someone else; not self-proclaimed. Additionally, as is often the case with any extremist group, such labels usually really identify someone quite far from that meaning. Moreover the clandestine usage of labels, such as “Mama bear” can easily be reinterpreted into a Boyertown mom for liberty. At which point, you might as well just say it.

While Jessica did bring some very good points forward, in her interview, she certainly didn't do it via her Facebook page, like she said.

There's nothing there! (See two videos)

During my dealings with Jessica, I found her to be very nice and professional, also very accommodating. We scheduled Friday's interview at pretty much the last minute. I've addressed that. I would have preferred that much of this took place earlier in this season. However, what I've uncovered in one weekend is likely just the tip. Like I said, Jessica was very nice. That is the same thing that I heard from one of the Boyertown Forward members when their neighbor said that they met with their campaign representative from moms for liberty, "but she was so nice..."

It makes me sit back and think about what, and who, we're really dealing with. Is it Moms For Liberty? Is it 1776? Is it the Pro-Parent Coalition? All three of which we've shown that Jessica, despite denying it, is tied to with some degree.

This reminds me of a familiar response to the question "What's going on?"

Same shit. Different day.

You've been Up The Middle.

Press Release:

My name is Yergz. I'm a retired Secret Service Agent, turned political podcaster and radio host. I'm doing a story on the school board elections in my home town of Boyertown, PA (Berks County). There is a candidate, Jessica Skelton, who identifies as "self-funded," yet I can show that she's with Moms For Liberty, 1776 Project, Pro-Parent Coalition, and possibly others.

Please listen, here, at 5:30pm ET:

From one Mama Bear to another, we need to get back to basics and Wendy will do that fiscally and academically!

I'm so glad more people are looking and paying attention at the local level. We need to stop giving the federal government so much power.

May 16 is primary day!

These are the school board candidates that we support based on their record of standing up for parental rights in public schools.

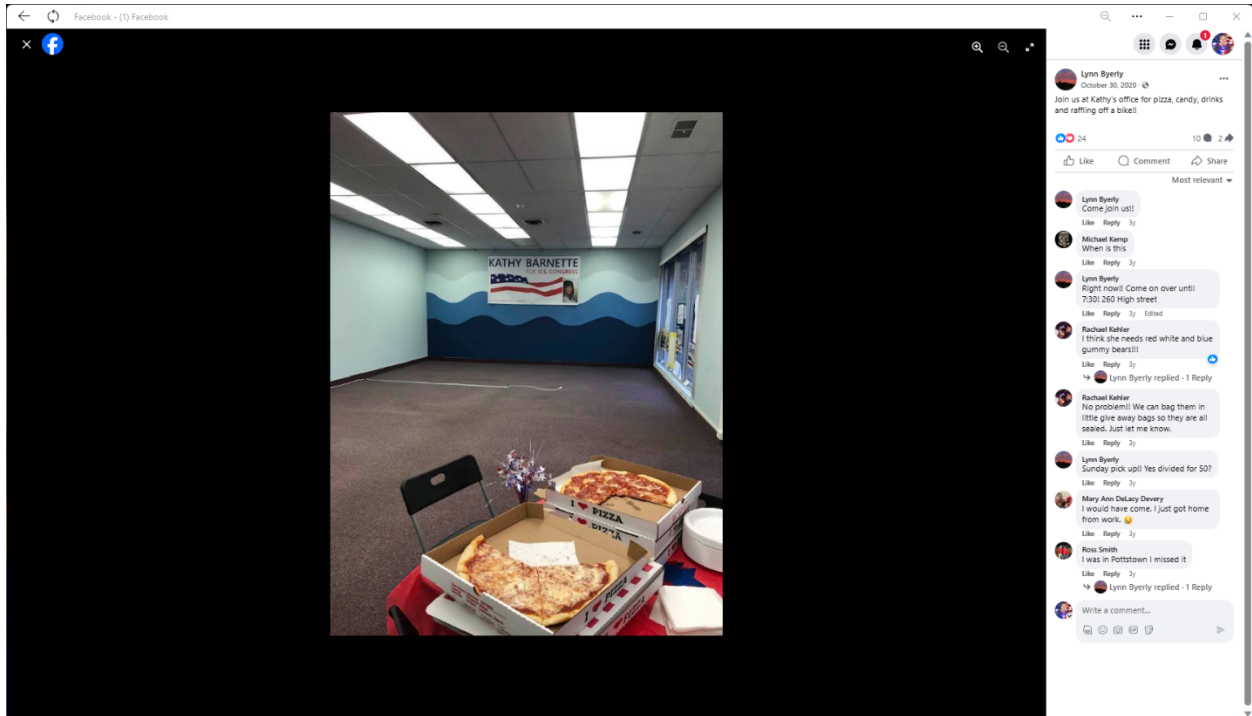

This is NOT an endorsement, ONLY a voter guide 🇺🇸

It's election day!!!

I have been humbled by the amount of people cheering me on and helping with my campaign in so many different ways.

Thank you SO much!!! Regardless of the outcome, I am grateful for this campaign experience (the good and the bad)!!! ... See more

To close out this investigation and not throw salt into open wounds, I've elected to NOT include the text messages from personal number to personal number that would further my claim that Jessica Skelton is unable to remove emotion from the situation. I believe that I've already proven that she is unable to achieve two of the five tenets of TKD.

Keep Talking!
